About 'From Jeans to Dreams'

Introduction:

From Jeans to Dreams was a collection done by ICBMC in association with Chakravarti Nepal, a nonprofit organization working towards education, sustainability, and community development.

The collection was done under the theme "Sustainability and Education Equity." The main aim was to collect unused denim and give them a new purpose by turning them into school bags, stationery pouches, and other useful items for children, especially those from rural communities. The project encouraged students, teachers, and staff members of British Model College to contribute towards the cause. The collection focused on showing how small contributions can help create a meaningful impact.

Project Summary:

The From Jeans to Dreams collection was conducted from 10th to 11th August 2026 at British Model College. The project was mainly focused on collecting unused jeans from students, teachers, and staff members, which would later be handed over to Chakraviru Nepal for upcycling. Before and during the collection, members of ICBMC reached out to different members of the college and encouraged them to donate any unused jeans they had. The collected jeans will be turned into useful items such as school bags, stationery pouches, and other products that can be provided to children, particularly students from rural communities.

The collection was carried out under the leadership of Itr. Neir Amatya, with members helping to spread awareness about the project and encourage participation. By the end of the two-day collection, a total of 17 pairs of jeans were collected. This brought together contributions from different members of the college community and gave unused clothing a new purpose.

The project also helped promote the ideas of sustainability and education equity among the college community. Instead of allowing unused jeans to go to waste, they can now be reused to create items that can benefit children in need. Overall, the collection was successfully completed, and the donated jeans will now be passed on to Chakraviru Nepal for the next stage of the project.
